

Tony Blair, Bill Clinton, Rick Warren and the Coming One World Whore Church and New World Order

The devil's stew is brewing! by Alan Franklin

February 26, 2011

Tony Blair, having done his best to destroy Great Britain, is now undermining the rest of the world. Ex British Prime Minister Blair is now on a mission to bring the world's faiths together and usher in peace. Ho ho ho. He should read the Bible, but as a Catholic convert that will be the last book he'll ever crack open. Blair, probably the biggest catastrophe in British history — and that is saying something — said recently in New York that world leaders must work to end religious conflict or face "catastrophe."

Blair thinks he knows a lot about "religion," which is a joke as he also once claimed to carry the Koran with him and described Islam as "a religion of peace." He certainly never read the Koran thoroughly as it is stuffed with exhortations to violence — see and download our Table of Truth.

Religion is as important in this century as political ideology was in the last, Blair said. His modestly titled Tony Blair Faith Foundation will fight "extremism" (that means taking the Bible literally), organize faith groups against poverty and illness, and educate people worldwide about religions other than their own, he said.

That's what his government did in Britain, removing lessons about Christianity from classrooms and replacing them with an unholy mess, a kind of multi-faith mish mash. The result is that children leave school with no knowledge of scripture and no understanding of right or wrong — or indeed why anything should be judged "right" or "wrong."

Blair, like Obama, weaves words into meaningless but feelgood phrases and soundbites. "Believe in a better tomorrow" and that kind of vacuity. Talking to so-called "religious and business leaders" at New York's upscale Time Warner Center, Blair blathered: "If faith becomes a countervailing force, pulling people apart, then it becomes destructive and indeed dangerous."

Former President Bill Clinton, who specialized in seducing young girls in the White House and who became a close friend of Blair's when both men were in office, opened the event, putting his arm around the former prime minister and calling his faith "genuine" and "deep." Just like Bill's no doubt. About as deep as a cheap veneer.

Here we have another dangerous, deluded man joining the party: Mr Success himself Rick Warren, the Purpose Driven pastor who is leading millions of Christians up a primrose path of false teaching. He is on Blair's advisory council together with Ismail Khudr Al-Shatti, an adviser to the prime minister of Kuwait; and world Baptist and Jewish leaders. Catholic Cardinal Cormac Murphy O'Connor of London has pledged to join the council when the pope allows him to retire. Yale University is a partner in the project. The former prime minister plans to teach at the school next year, leading a seminar on faith and globalization.

Blair said he defined extremists as "people who want to exclude the other if someone is of a different faith" (so in Tony's world anyone that believes Jesus is the only way to God is an extremist). Blair told the crowd that although Islamic extremism draws the most attention, "there are elements of extremism in every major faith." He did not, however, give any instances in which Christians have ever tried to blow up airplanes or detonate bombs in coffee bars. Oddly enough, the only people ever to do these things have been young Islamics.

"It is important where people of good faith combat such extremism, that they are supported," said Blair, who is an envoy for the Quartet of Mideast (non) "peacemakers" — the US, European Union, Russia and the United Nations. Having destroyed Great Britain, as we said, one's heart sinks at the damage he is doing in the Middle East. Blair's foundation's many initiatives include promoting research on religion and globalization and he is clearly one of the key players whose policies will help usher in the coming one world government.

Unfortunately for the Blairs and Clintons of this world, they won't be running this government. That job, the Bible tells us, is reserved for antichrist. Blair said the foundation would not focus on "doctrinal inquiry" (We wouldn't want to look closely at anything like our fundamental beliefs, after all!!) or "subsume different faiths in some universal faith of the lowest common denominator."

Sayyid Syeed, a national leader of the Islamic Society of North America and a veteran of interfaith outreach, said it is possible to find common ground without watering down religious teachings if the work is based on sound scholarship about each faith. "It has been done in the past and can be done again," Syeed said. Richard C Levin, Yale's president, who shared the stage with Blair and two young American Muslim leaders, said the community service programs that will be part of the foundation's work will build a bond among young people, despite any theological differences.

Tell that to the Muslims slaughtering Christians in countries round the world. Look at Sudan, for starters. When clever but foolish men like Blair and Clinton start blathering on about bringing faiths together, despite the fact that all religions teach diametrically opposite doctrines, you know the end is close. The one world church — the Bible calls it the Great Whore Church — is forming before your eyes, as is on the soon to appear one world government. Come along to my talks or buy our books to find out a whole lot more!